

Meridian Breaks Ground on 84,000 SF Meat Processing Facility in Chicago

Posted on April 11, 2019 by Kristin Hiller in Development, Illinois, Industrial, Midwest

Amylu Foods will occupy the plant.

CHICAGO — Meridian Design Build has broken ground on an 84,000-square-foot USDA meat processing plant for Amylu Foods in Chicago's Stockyards Industrial Park. The new sausage processing facility will include 56,000 square feet of production and cold-storage space and a freezer. The property will also include 16,500 square feet of corporate office space, including separate raw and cooked facilities, test kitchens and a laboratory. An expandable ammonia refrigeration plant will accommodate plant cooling and production loads. Harris Architects and Kimley-Horn make up the project team.

